BOLETÍN INSTITUTO DE IDIOMAS

Departamento de Idiomas ¿Por qué estudiar inglés?

Inglés es una asignatura que se encuentra fuera del plan de estudios como requisito de grado de Uniagraria. Además en el mundo globalizado saber inglés es una valiosa competencia que le permite al profesional interactuar en otras culturas para alcanzar objetivos tales como:

- o Producir artículos científicos para publicación en revistas internacionales.
- o Buscar información en plataformas digitales para adelantar estudios en el exterior. Así mismo acceder a becas, pasantías o programas de intercambio.
- o Ingresar como empresario al comercio electrónico al igual que implementar procesos de producción dentro y fuera de la organización.
- o Abrir oportunidades laborales en compañías internacionales las cuales buscan empleados con habilidades en el idioma extranjero para sostener conversación con representantes de otros países, asistir a conferencias, producir reportes, leer e interpretar artículos entre otros.

Así que estudiar inglés no es un privilegio, es una necesidad

Languages Department Why study English?

English is a course outside of the study program and is a requirement for graduation of Uniagraria.

In the globalised world to know English is a valuable skill that allows the professional to interact in other cultures for achieving objectives such as:

- o To produce scientific articles for publishing in international magazines.
- o To find information on digital platforms for advancing international study. Also to access to scholarships, internships or international exchange programs.
- o To take part as a businessman in digital commerce as well as to implement production processes inside and outside of an organization.
- o To widen employment opportunities in international companies who are looking for employees with foreign language skills for keeping a conversation with representatives from other countries, to attend conferences, to produce reports, to read and understand articles amongst other tasks.

Talking English is not a privilege, it is a necessity

¿Sabías qué?

En el Reino Unido se crearon instrumentos insignia de la comunicación que a través de los años han evolucionado para mantener informado en cuestión de segundos al mundo entero. Por ejemplo:

El Teléfono:

Inventado por el científico Alexander Graham Bell, quien consiguió la primera patente oficial en marzo de 1876, por haber creado un aparato para transmitir la voz humana mediante señales eléctricas. Más información en el video publicado en: World Wide Web:

<http://www.history.com/topics/inventions/alexander-graham-bell>

El Computador :

Creado por el matemático Charles Babbage, más conocido como "El Padre de la Computación o el Pionero de la Computación". En 1821 diseñó la Máquina Diferencial No. 1 utilizada para calcular series de valores e imprimirlos automáticamente en una tabla. En 1834 construyó la Máquina Analítica No. 2 la cual posee características esenciales de un computador digital moderno. Más información en World Wide Web:

Did you Know?

In the United Kingdom some flagship instruments of communication were created that over the years have meant we can stay in touch in seconds through the whole world. For example:

The Telephone:

Invented by the British Scientist Alexander Graham Bell, who achieved the first official patent in March 1876, for having created a device that transmits the human voice by means of an electric current. More information in the video published at World Wide Web:

The Computer:

Invented by the mathematician Charles Babbage, also known as "The Father of Computing or The Computer Pioneer". In 1821 he designed the Difference Engine No. 1 used for calculating a series of values and print results automatically in a table. In 1834 he built the Analytical Engine No. 2 which has the essential characteristics of a modern digital computer. Internet (World Wide Web):

Diseñado en 1989 por el científico Tim Berners-Lee. Este maravilloso invento facilita la conexión entre varios computadores para ordenar y compartir información en segundos por medio de un sistema tecnológico llamado hipertextos. Más información en World Wide Web: <http://webfoundation.org/about/vision/history-of-the-web/>

El Televisor:

Inventado por John Logie Baird quien realizó la primera transmisión de un rostro. Este magnífico evento ocurrió el 26 de enero de 1926 desde el segundo piso de una casa ubicada en Frith Street, Soho en Londres.

La palabra "televisor" significa la reproducción y transmisión instantánea de los detalles del movimiento de una imagen. En 1937 John Logie Baird presentó el funcionamiento de este aparato en una transmisión realizada desde el Museo de Ciencia de Londres, ubicado en South Kensington. Internet (World Wide Web):

Designed in 1989 by the Scientist Tim Berners – Lee. This wonderful invention facilitates the connexion between different computers for sorting and sharing information in seconds by means of a technological system called hypertext. The Television:

Invented by John Logie Baird who made the first reproduction and transmission of a human face. This magnificent event took place on the 26th January 1926 from the upper room of a house located at Frith Street, Soho in City of London.

The word 'television' means the reproduction and transmission of image's movement details instantly. In 1937 he showed the functioning of this apparatus in a transmission made from Science Museum of London, located in South Kensington.
